

▶ THE CHALLENGE

ISO certification is a complex, sensitive and admin-heavy process.

Clients need to rely on certification consultants and vendors to ensure successful ISO certification. With so many criteria involved, consultants are under constant pressure to deliver as gap analyses not only take time to complete but they're risky; there is the potential of costly administration errors.

BENEFITS FOR THE CONSULTANT:

- 'On-the-job' access to information means less preparation time needed for consultations and access to reference material at point of conversation.
- Identifying and recording gaps and compliance quickly and effectively during analysis reduces time wastage.
- Automatically generated and consolidated digital reports after the session means quicker turnaround times for clients and less administration for consultants

BENEFITS FOR THE COMPANIES:

- The ability to check if you are ready for ISO certification by completing a gap analysis and compliance advisor.
- A report that details your company's ISO gaps and compliance is immediately available after completing the questions.
- Helps you to be 'more prepared' for an ISO audit as you have an understanding of where you are with regards to your gaps and compliances.
- Potentially saves you time and costs to become certified as your gaps and compliances have been reported on via a self-diagnosis and this can be shared with the SMEs for further certification.

BENEFITS FOR MANAGERS:

- A weekly usage report gives an indication of consultation availability. This could be used as part of resource planning and the allocations of new tasks/projects.
- Contributes to potential cross-sale/pipeline opportunities.
- Information on-hand could lead to shorter turnaround times for cross-sale proposals to clients.
